Substance of Interview:

Discussed the 112 1st issue. It appears proper support for the newly claimed limitations to the sheath are found on page 12 lines 9-22. Discussed how the "broadest reasonable interpretation" of the instantly claimed invention consistent with the specification currently fails to exclude the disclosures of Newman and Paulson. It is agreed that the intermediate products and the process of applicant are different from that of the applied prior art. However, current evidence is not conclusive to demonstrate that the final products are different. To overcome, the instant figures were consulted and they clearly show how the distribution of the binder material is carefully controlled. Incorporating a more accurate/detailed description of the drawings into the specification could define the claims in such a way as to avoid the prior art. For instance, it is noted that in the instant invention binder material is always located between the yarns being bonded together, and such is not inherently the case in the constructions of the applied prior art.
